

Cocky

March 24, 2017 2:00 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

Cesar Garcia tightly holds a rooster as Clay Adams, right, snaps a photo. The two were part of a random group of facilities services workers who captured the bird outside Newcomb Hall on Thursday (March 23). The department began receiving calls about a rooster crowing near Josephine Louise Hall. A local exterminating company was called in to assist. The lucky bird, which students were affectionately referring to as “Cow Cock,” in reference to the beloved “Cow Cat,” has been adopted by a facilities services employee.