

Get in the game

January 29, 2018 3:30 PM New Wave staff
newwave@tulane.edu

The second annual Special Olympics Unified Rivalry Basketball Game between Tulane and LSU takes place Saturday, Feb. 3, in Fogelman Arena in the Devlin Fieldhouse (pictured). (Photo by Parker Waters)

An internship deadline and a basketball game with a mission are a couple things to add to your to-do list this week.

Don't miss the TRIP

Registration for the spring 2018 Tulane Remote Internship Program (TRIP) is open now through Friday, Feb. 2.

The program allows undergraduate students an opportunity to work remotely for national companies while still living in New Orleans. In addition to interns working 6-10 hours per week for their employers, Tulane pays for the selected interns to visit their employers' respective cities and offices to meet with their teams and supervisors, and get a feel for the physical culture of the company.

To get into the internship game, visit Tulane Career Wave to apply and for more details.

Unified Rivalry

To enjoy an actual game, tickets are on sale now for the second annual Special Olympics Unified Rivalry Basketball Game between Tulane and LSU on Saturday, Feb. 3, at 10:15 a.m. on the uptown campus.

Two teams, one consisting of Tulane students and Special Olympics athletes and the other of LSU students and Special Olympics athletes, will compete for bragging rights and the coveted Unified Rivalry Cup. The game will take place at Fogelman Arena in the Devlin Fieldhouse before the Tulane women's basketball game against South Florida.

Questions about the game may be directed to specialolympicsnola@gmail.com.