Beginning Sunday, March 25, through Monday, April 2, Tulane University students will take a short hiatus from classes for spring break. Through a quick survey of 40 Tulane students, it became clear that spring break means different things to different students.

Some will travel across the country to spend time with family or relax on a beach with friends. Others will contribute their free time to community service projects while others plan to unapologetically stick around campus to catch up on studying — and sleep.

Tell us your plans by taking today's poll.

How will you spend spring break?
