

Communication breakdown

July 31, 2018 2:30 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

In preparation for a final exam, Katelyn Black, a professor of practice in the School of Science and Engineering's Department of Neuroscience, leads a discussion on how natural and man-made chemicals can alter communication between neurons. The discussion was part of a course titled Brain and Behavior taking place Tuesday morning in Dinwiddie Hall. Summer classes are winding down as the end of the semester approaches.