

Commencement 2010: Moments and Mortarboards

May 18, 2010 3:15 AM New Wave staff
newwave@tulane.edu

All the mortarboards and robes have been put away, the confetti and beach balls are long since swept up or squirreled away as keepsakes □ Commencement 2010 is over. As members of the graduating class go out to make their name in the world, we'll take one last opportunity to wish them well, and wax nostalgic about the moments and mortarboards from this year's ceremony.

Photographers Ryan Rivet and Sally Asher capture special moments of the 2010 class at commencement, including their top-of-head messages, in this multimedia presentation produced by Rivet.