

Tulane University

Class of 2010: Hands On

May 12, 2010 11:00 AM

New Wave staff newwave@tulane.edu

Across the spectrum of schools at Tulane, community involvement and service were driving ideas for the class of 2010. The students embraced this ideology, and the impact of their service was felt in public schools and medical clinics, homebuilding sites and paint rallies. Their passion and desire for the renaissance of the community will not soon be forgotten. These sentiments are evident in this second video tribute to the class of 2010.

The class of 2010 talks about New Orleans and their eagerness to get involved in the rebuilding process in this video produced by Ryan Rivet and members of the Tulane publications staff.