

Semester

January 01, 2010 12:00 AM

Click to view larger photo with caption.

First-year students get their first taste of New Orleansâstyle sno-balls, a refreshing treat during move-in on Saturday (Aug. 21). (Photos by Paula Burch-Celentano)

Parents line up outside of McAlister Auditorium to cheer the class of 2014 as students exit after the convocation ceremony.

Tulane President Scott Cowen is filled with optimism at the quality of the class of 2014. More than 44,000 students applied to join the incoming class of 1,630.

Parents help their students retrieve belongings that were shipped to campus on huge FedEx trucks.

A banner welcomes students and parents as they enter the Josephine Louise House, a female-only residence hall.

Carrying colorful artwork on her back while she pushes a suitcase, a mom helps her student move into a residence hall.