

Be of service

January 17, 2017 12:45 PM Cheryl Gerber

newwave@tulane.edu

Tulane freshman Evan Doomes paints an exterior wall at Open Minds Open Hearts Daycare in New Orleans on Monday (Jan. 16). Doomes is one of several students from Tulane, Loyola and Xavier universities who volunteered for a day of service at locations around the city to celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

Tulane, Xavier and Loyola students work side-by-side to fill a sandbox at Homer Plessy School in the 7th ward.

Sophomore Bri'anna Lowe, left, and graduate student Luc Ngassam pick up litter along the Lafitte Greenway.

Several students from Tulane, Loyola and Xavier universities volunteered on Monday (Jan. 16) for a day of service at locations around the city to celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

Tulane freshman Evan Doomes paints an exterior wall at Open Minds Open Hearts Daycare in New Orleans.

Tulane, Xavier and Loyola students work side-by-side to fill a sandbox at Homer Plessy School in the 7th ward.

Sophomore Bri'anna Lowe, left, and graduate student Luc Ngassam pick up litter along the Lafitte Greenway.