

Dynamic duo

July 11, 2017 1:30 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

Tulane graduate student Gabrielle Clark prepares to measure the ability of cells to alter the size and function of reproductive tissues in the lab of Kristin S. Miller in the J. Bennett Johnston Building on the downtown campus. Miller and her team are researching the dynamic role of cells and protein composition in the female pelvic floor to improve the clinical treatment of pelvic organ prolapse.