

Sound system

August 23, 2017 3:00 PM Paula Burch-Celentano

pburch@tulane.edu

The Tulane University Marching Band (TUMB) braves the August heat and humidity to practice marching basics during the annual band camp on Brown Field. The intense week-long camp is in preparation for the first home game on September 2 versus Grambling State University.

The Tulane University Marching Band braves the August heat and humidity to practice marching basics during the annual band camp on Brown Field. The intense week-long camp is in preparation for the first home game on Sept. 2 versus Grambling State University.

Band members concentrate on form and movement as they march to the beat of the drums.

Piccolo player Amanda Lee adds a high note to the sound.

A member of the cymbal section sports a pair of Angry Wave crew socks.

Tulane senior Casey Kotowski, a member of the color guard, aces the rifle routine.

Joe Foster, right, stands at attention to support the weight of his sousaphone.

Drummer George Pratt takes full advantage of a hard-earned break.