

Point of view

December 11, 2017 3:30 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

On the fourth floor of Howard-Tilton Memorial Library hangs “Migrant Eyes: Visual Stories of Life in a New Country,” a participatory photography exhibit featuring images by local immigrant youth. Organized by Tulane alumna Corrie Boudreaux, a photojournalist and documentary photographer, the show introduces the broader community to issues and experiences faced by young migrants in the New Orleans area.