

Street smarts

January 25, 2018 4:00 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

First-year students Claire Purcell, left, and Maddie Marsh, right, heed advice for staying safe during Mardi Gras from Tulane University Police Lieutenant Anthony Dominguez, far left, and Michael Moore, far right, operations manager with Shuttles and Transportation. Dominguez and Moore were part of a Mardi Gras information fair sponsored by Campus Health on the Berger Family Lawn on Thursday afternoon. Representatives from various student services offered educational activities on safer consumption strategies, conversations around the consequences of drug use, and how to intervene if they find themselves or a peer in a risky situation.