WATCH: Three fourth-year School of Medicine students explain what Match Day means to them and learn where they'll spend the next chapter of their careers.

There were cheers, hugs and tears of joy as Tulane University School of Medicine students learned where they'll spend the next three-to-seven years of their training. On Friday, March 16, 191 fourth-year medical students were matched with residency programs around the country, including 31 students who will continue their careers in Louisiana. Watch the excitement of Match Day 2018.
