

Duck-side view

March 21, 2018 3:15 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

A flock of whistling ducks stands cautiously near the edge of the lagoon in Audubon Park. Unlike white domestic and Muscovy ducks which tend to be less threatened by humans, whistling ducks are timid, and prone to retreat when potential danger is near.