

Craw feast

April 23, 2018 4:30 PM Photos by New Wave staff
newwave@tulane.edu

The Tulane community feasted on more than 20,000 pounds of crawfish during Crawfest on Saturday, April 21. The event is the largest student-run music festival in the country.

Students show off overflowing mounds of crawfish, corn and potatoes. (Photo by Megan Calvin)

Students pose in front of a photo backdrop with the words Krewe de Craw, a play on the names of Mardi Gras organizations. (Photo by Sally Asher)

The Tulane community enjoys live music and tasty food on the Berger Family Lawn on the uptown campus. (Photo by Sally Asher)

The Baha Men, known for their hit “Who Let the Dogs Out” gets the crowd moving. (Photo by Ezra Winters)

Euphoric festival-goers pass beach balls during the musical performance. (Photo by Ezra Winters)