

Fresh catch

September 06, 2018 1:15 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

In the shade of a cypress tree, a juvenile white ibis feasts on a cicada nymph outside of Blessey Hall. When a nearby construction project required the removal of an area of turf, the bird moved in to prey on the exposed bugs.