

Extrovert

September 20, 2018 3:30 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

Hibiscus bloom abundantly in the Louisiana Native Garden outside the Meryll and Sam Israel Jr. Environmental Sciences Building on the uptown campus. Known for its hardy nature and showy flowers, the hibiscus plant has been used to make tea for centuries. Today, the flowers can also be found in syrups and jams.