

2022 Barbara Moely Service Learning Award recipients honored

April 20, 2022 11:00 AM Tulane Today staff
today@tulane.edu

Last week the Center for Public Service honored the 2022 recipients of the Barbara E. Moely Service Learning Teaching Award at a faculty reception at Cudd Hall. The Moely Award is given in honor of professor emerita Barbara E. Moely, who founded service learning at Tulane in the 1990s. The award is presented annually to professors who embrace Moely's exceptional dedication to bringing classrooms to life through engaged community partnerships.

This year's recipients are Laura McKinney, associate professor in the departments of Sociology and Environmental Studies, and Ashley Keller Nelson, senior professor of practice in Business and Legal Studies (both pictured below).

Read more about the criteria for the award here.

From left: Robin Forman, senior vice president for academic affairs and provost, congratulates 2022 Barbara E. Moely Service Learning Teaching Award recipient Laura McKinney, associate professor of Sociology and Environmental Studies in the School of Liberal Arts, along with Dean Brian Edwards. (Photo by Maurice Smith)

From left: Forman congratulates Moely award recipient Ashley Keller Nelson, senior professor of practice in Business and Legal Studies at the A.B. Freeman School of Business, along with Dean Paulo Goes. (Photo by Maurice Smith)