

Trash to Treasure sale inspires Tulanians to repurpose and reuse

August 19, 2022 1:30 PM Tulane Today staff
today@tulane.edu

Last week, students and parents packed the Tulane's Trash to Treasure sale — an annual tradition that finds new owners for gently used items. Trash to Treasure is a student-led waste reduction initiative. Each spring, student volunteers collect unwanted residence hall items from students and sell them at reduced prices to members of the Tulane community at the beginning of the next fall semester. Proceeds benefit local nonprofit organizations. This year's sale took place during Move-In week, Aug. 15-19.

Students and other members of the Tulane community peruse clothing, books and household goods at the annual Trash to Treasure sale. (Photo by Rusty Costanza)

A student checks out an assortment of pots and pans at Trash to Treasure. (Photo by Rusty Costanza)