In the first-floor gallery of the Tidewater building on the downtown campus, Michael Moolekamp (left), a volunteer paramedic with Tulane Emergency Medical Services, administers a flu shot in the arm of Akhil Chandran, a first-year graduate student in the School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine. The flu shot clinic, sponsored by Campus Health, is part of a month-long campaign to administer no-cost flu shots to students. Six additional flu clinic dates will be scheduled and students can learn more by visiting the Campus Health flu prevention webpage. (Photo by Paula Burch-Celentano)
