First-year student Adam Kline rubs his eyes as he waits in line for coffee and donuts. Kline, who would soon be on his way to an ethics class, joined other students for the Dean's Coffee, a Friday morning tradition held on the porch of Cudd Hall by Newcomb-Tulane College.

Free donuts and coffee rarely fails to draw a crowd. This was the final Dean's Coffee of the semester.

Amid the hubbub, senior Jessica Biemiller remains focused on studying for a numerical analysis test she will take later in the day.
