

The face of medicine, c. 1900

August 08, 2013 1:00 AM Courtesy Tulane University Archives
newwave@tulane.edu

Taken sometime in the late-19th to early 20th century, this photo depicts a class of Tulane University medical students. The location is probably the Richardson Memorial Medical Building, located in downtown New Orleans on Canal Street. The structure was renamed the Josephine Hutchinson Memorial Building in 1906 and is still inhabited by the School of Medicine today.