

Game, set, match

March 24, 2014 1:00 AM Photos by Guillermo Cabrera-Rojo
newwave@tulane.edu

With the opening of envelopes across the country, the futures of graduating medical school students are decided on the third Friday of March each year ? Match Day. Members of Tulane University School of Medicine class of 2014 were abuzz when they found out where they would spend the next years of their lives on Friday (March 21). For a complete list of students and their matches, click here.

Anoop Kar, center, celebrates his upcoming residency in emergency medicine at Louisiana State University with Lucy Witte, left, and Nicole Jackson.

Alexis McCabe, left, shares her residency match in emergency medicine at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston with Luisito Caleone, center, who matched with a residency in pediatrics and emergency medicine at LSU's New Orleans and Laura Poellet, who will practice as a psychiatry resident at Vanderbilt University.

Above and beyond his match in family medicine at St. Anthony North Hospital in Westminster, Colo., Kenneth Ott, second from right, also took home some cash when he won the pot in a Tulane Match Day tradition where each student puts $5 into the pot and a name is drawn to determine the winner.