

The Green Room: Entrepreneurism in NOLA

September 04, 2015 2:00 AM Ryan Rivet
rrivet@tulane.edu

It's a somewhat common notion that entrepreneurship in New Orleans is a byproduct of the recovery from Hurricane Katrina. In the last 10 years, the city has seen unprecedented growth of startups, but how much of that is really the result of Katrina? New Wave went down to the Idea Village and talked to CEO and co-founder Tim Williamson, a Tulane University alumnus, about the history of entrepreneurship in the Crescent City. His answers were not what we expected.