

Eye to eye

February 18, 2016 3:00 PM Photo by Ryan Rivet rivet@tulane.edu

Dimitri Stroumbakis, a visitor to the Tulane University uptown campus from New York City, examines a sculpture by Kate Clark in the Newcomb Art Museum. The sculpture is part of the “Kate Clark: Mysterious Presence” exhibit that is featured in the museum through April 10. The artist uses the centuries-old craft of taxidermy to sculpt humanlike faces onto bestial forms.