

Mother knows best

May 06, 2016 1:00 PM Photo by Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

A female mallard carefully watches over her newly hatched chicks in Bayou Metairie in New Orleans' City Park. Females may lay more than half their body weight in eggs. Chicks are able to swim as soon as they hatch, and instinctively stay near their mother for warmth and protection but also to learn about their surroundings and to learn how to find food.