

By the book

June 23, 2016 2:00 PM Paula Burch-Celentano

pburch@tulane.edu

5042892107

An anatomy textbook is nearby as two students examine a cadaver in a neuroanatomy and central nervous system dissection lab on Thursday (June 23) on the uptown campus. During the five-week course, students receive hands-on experience with the anatomy of the cranial nerves including where they are located, what structures are around them, and which neuro tracts are related to them.