

Sign up

October 10, 2016 2:00 PM Paula Burch-Celentano
pburch@tulane.edu

Second-year law student Shane Copelin, left, and Tania Motos, a junior in paralegal studies bide their time in the Stern Hall breezeway on Friday morning (Oct. 7) while waiting to assist passersby with registering to vote in the upcoming presidential election. Their effort is supported by the Tulane Law School, and Tulane chapters of the Black Law Student Association, the American Constitution Society, and the Public Interest Law Foundation. The last day to register in Louisiana to vote in the November 8 contest is Tuesday (Oct. 11).