

Election 2016: Does your vote really count?

October 14, 2016 1:30 PM Ryan Rivet

rrivet@tulane.edu

As Americans prepare to cast their ballots in November, Tulane faculty experts are weighing in on the hows and whys of the presidential election. For the first installment of our conversation about the 2016 election, Celeste Lay, associate professor in the Tulane Department of Political Science, explains the history behind the Electoral College. Listen to the podcast.